INSIGHTS

- Morning is strongest overall: R341,970 (49% of total revenue)
- Afternoon is weakest across all 3 stores: only R126,879 (18%)
- Lower Manhattan's morning trade is the single biggest number on the table: R131,008
- Astoria breaks the pattern, it peaks in the evening (R95,672), not

WHEN THE STORE COMES ALIVE

Weekday vs Weekend by time of day

INSIGHTS

- Weekdays drive 72% of total revenue (R503,588 vs R195,225 weekend)
- Weekday mornings alone earn R246,24 more than the entire weekend combined
- Morning is the strongest slot on both weekday and weekend
- Afternoon is the weakest slot across both weekday and weekend

REVENUE BY DAY OF WEEK AND TIME OF DAY

INSIGHTS

- Revenue is consistent across all 7 days (R96,894–R101,677 range)
- Monday is the strongest day overall: R101,677
- Saturday is the weakest day overall: R96,894
- Tuesday has the single best morning: R51,198
- Morning is the top time slot every day of the week

SALES TRENDS ACROSS PRODUCTS AND TIME

Monthly revenue trend

INSIGHTS

- Revenue doubled in six months: R81,678 (Jan) → R166,486 (Jun)
- Only one month had a decrease in sales: February, at R76,145
- From March onward, growth was consistent, month after month
- June was our strongest month on record

MONTHLY REVENUE BY PRODUCT CATEGORY

INSIGHTS

- Growth is broad-based, every category roughly doubled from Jan to Jun, not just one or two
- Coffee grew the most: R31,257 → R64,789
- Tea grew steadily too: R22,622 → R46,243
- February's dip appeared across every category, indicating a business-wide slowdown rather than a product-specific issue

MONTHLY REVENUE TREND BY ORDER SIZE CATEGORY

INSIGHTS

- Personal orders drive almost everything: R665,960 – 95% of total revenue
- Personal orders nearly doubled: R77,825 (Jan) → R158,202 (Jun)
- Small group orders barely moved: R3,133 → R6,772, staying under 5% of revenue all year
- Bulk orders are almost non-existent, only R3,816 across all 6 months

AVERAGE ORDER VALUE TREND

INSIGHTS

- Average order value stayed essentially flat all year: R4.65–R4.72
- Overall average across 6 months: R4.69
- No real upward or downward movement, month to month
- Revenue nearly doubled in the same period, meaning growth came from more visits, not bigger

WHAT'S HIDING BENEATH THE NUMBERS

Outliers & risks to watch

- Outlier : Stagnant order value
- Finding: Average order value stayed flat at R4.65-R4.72 all year, while total revenue nearly doubled
- Why it matters: All growth is coming from more customers, not bigger orders, if customer numbers ever drop, revenue has nothing else to fall back on
- Watch: Track average order value every month going

CONCLUSION (INSIGHTS & RECOMMENDATIONS)

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR IMPROVING SALES PERFORMANCE & INSIGHTS PRODUCTS

-  revenue
Coffee and Tea drive 66.7% of all
-  Top 10 products bring in R551,788 -
79% of the business

- Bottom 10 products contribute just
28,139 - only 4%
- Drinking Chocolate depends entirely on one
product, Hot chocolate

INSIGHTS & RECOMMENDATIONS STORES

-  Hell's Kitchen 33.8%, Astoria 33.2%, Lower Manhattan 32.9%
- All three locations are performing at a similar, healthy level,
- Recommendation: Identify what gives Hell's Kitchen its slight edge and apply it across stores

INSIGHTS & RECOMMENDATIONS

TIMING

-  Morning is the strongest trading window, across every store and every day
-  Afternoon is consistently the weakest period, company-wide
- Weekdays generate R503,588 (72%), weekends generate R195,225 (28%)
- Recommendation: prioritize staffing around mornings, test promotions for slower afternoon and weekend periods

DAYS OF THE WEEK

-  Monday is the strongest day (R101,677), Saturday the weakest (R96,894)
- Revenue stays remarkably stable across the week, only a R4,783 spread
- Recommendation: no urgent change needed here, Tuesday's strong morning is worth studying for ideas and possibly replicating on quieter days.

MONTHLY TREND

-  Revenue grew from R81,678 in January to R166,486 in June
- June's peak likely reflects seasonal demand for hot beverages
- February's decrease affected every category equally, suggesting an external cause
- Recommendation: Treat this as a seasonal pattern, not a one-off, plan inventory, staffing, and marketing pushes for the winter months in advance each year. Consider a matching strategy for warmer months (e.g. iced drinks or cold beverage promotions) to protect revenue when the seasonal

ORDER SIZE

- Personal orders make up R665,960 – 95% of total revenue
- Small group orders remain under 5% all year
- Bulk orders are nearly untouched, just R3,816 for the whole period
- Recommendation: The business is built almost entirely on individual customers. Bulk and group orders represent a largely untapped growth opportunity, worth testing group bundles, bulk discounts, or

Risks to monitor

- Average order value has stayed flat between R4.65 and R4.72 all year
- The "Expensive Spend" tier is almost empty, suggesting a pricing or visibility issue
- A few categories rely heavily on a single product, adding some concentration risk
Recommendation: track average order value monthly going forward, and review pricing and promotion for the premium tier

IDEAS FOR GROWTH AND IMPROVEMENT

Grow customer frequency and retention

- A simple loyalty or stamp card (buy 9, get the 10th free)
- Email or SMS list for slow-period promotions
- Birthday or anniversary offers to bring lapsed customers back
- Group or office catering packages
- Bulk discount pricing for orders above a certain size

Grow underperforming products

- Seasonal or limited-time menu refresh to re-test weak products with new framing
- Staff upselling training focused on featuring underperformers alongside best sellers
- Menu redesign – placement matters, feature top sellers prominently, quietly retire the rest
- Combo deals, pair a drink with a bakery item at a small discount. "Add on" prompts at
